Communication

Appomattox, Va., September 13, 1939

Editor Times Virginian,
Dear Sir,

On August 27, 1939, when our Heavenly Father called to His eternal home His faithful servant, J. H. Thornhill, there was sadness in the hearts of his many friends, but they were thankful that one so upright, frank, but courteous in all his dealings with his fellowman, had been spared to the community for 87 years. Mr. Thornhill lived a quiet life, but lived it well and raised a large family of children and raised them well and they can feel proud of the example he set. A man who lived to the age of 87 years and lived the upright life that he lived deserves special mention when he has passed away. I knew Mr. Thornhill all my life, and consider it a privilege to have had in him a dear friend, and his passing caused me great sorrow.

Silver's History

Originally a trading post colony of the Netherlands, New York's first silversmiths were mostly of Holland Dutch birth, or heritage, and although by 1663 New York had become an English colony, the silver made by its craftsmen retained the Dutch flavor, both in design and ornamentation. Gradually this was modified by the influx of English and Huguenot craftsmen. The result was pieces of silver with a distinction all their own. In form and ornamentation they were a mingling of both the Dutch and English traditions with slight touches of the French, reflecting the presence of a tightly knit though small group of Huguenots. Because of these three influences, New York silver until the middle of the Eighteenth century and, in some cases, almost to the outbreak of the American Revolution varied distinctly from that being made in the other English colonies.

Marble Table Tops

From Elizabethan England records of marble stone tables in 1588, although it was not the early part of the Eighteenth century that marble appeared as an important furnishing feature in England. Its use in Italy probably predates this, since the resources there and the natural character of the stone would both encourage the use of marble.

Giants' Causeway

There is no natural formation anywhere to compare to the Giants Causeway, on the northern coast of Ireland, with its piled up hexagonal rocks, a gigantic fantastic honeycomb in stone. It is one of the wonders of the world and a highway by the sea supposedly built by the grandson of the giant Finn McCool, which leads to it.

FATHER DARLEAF'S COLUMN

by c. h. r.

It is always a pleasure to stop by Max Wheeler's at Spout Spring and exchange the time of day. The other day Father Darkleaf dropped by and found that Max had on display a tremendous stalk of corn. It was stretched out over the front door, and according to Max, measured 14 feet three and 1/2 inches. The elongated stalk was raised by Mott Cyrus, of Spout Spring, to whom we doff our editorial hat.

It occurs to us to suggest that when a picture is taken, it is always advisable to write the date and place it was taken on the reverse of the print, together with any other interesting information. Of late, several old pictures have been brought into our office, whose value is lessened by the fact that one does not have the facts concerning them.

Attention should be given to the long and enviable record of professor L. Crawley as principal of the Appomattox high school. He came to our community for the session of 1908-09, when the school was located at the present site of the T. W. Moses residence. There were 66 enrolled that year. The high school department went to the third year in 1909, the new school building on the present campus was erected.

How many of our readers recall the dense woods on the site of the present campus? Mrs. Gracie O'Brien has a fine picture taken when the old class-room building was opened, probably the first session, and showing horse-drawn wagons for the transportation of students.

In 1912 the state of North Carolina sent a delegation to Appomattox to see how the practice of hauling pupils worked out, and later adopted this method.

The local high school has many "priorities." It was one of the first group of ten agricultural schools in Virginia, one for each congressional district. It claims to be the first to have a separate home economics cottage. It was one of the very first to "haul" pupils, and it was one of the first to use what is now the 4-H club idea.

Prior to professor Crawley, Mr. McDonald was principal, and before Mr John Fisher held forth for a number of years. Mr. Crawley had taught at Fredrick College, Maryland; and also taught at Martinsville. There were 9 teachers at the local school in 1909. They got about the same salaries that teachers receive now, and the local school always had a full nine-month term.

The dormitory began its service in 1914. It cost $11,000. Pupils were "boarded" in a number of residences around town, and came here from nearby counties. Professor Crawley was the agriculture teacher for several years, as well as principal. Mrs. May Wheeler also taught home economics. How many recall Miss Alice Moses?

Stables were located near where the present home economics is located. Professor Crawley says he helped get up the stumps where the present playground is!

The auditorium went up in 1922. Mr. Featherston was superintendent then.

We neglected to state that professor Crawley also taught in Georgia before coming here. The school board once leased him for a residence a dwelling next to the present Lee Theatre. Then, he lived in the dormitory five years. He has had many tempting offers to leave Appomattox, but local folks wouldn't let him go. He says he knows of only one other principal who has matched his service tenure, that being at Lexington.

We hope he is good for another thirty years!

The local school has alumni in 26 states, but that's another story and we'll try to get it written, one day.

In the meantime, there is the news flash of the killing of the premier of Rumania!

Nobody can define Liberty satisfactorily.

During the Civil War, Lincoln made a speech in Baltimore, in which he said: "The shepherd drives the wolf from the sheep's throat, for which the sheep thanks the shepherd as his liberator, while the wolf denounces him for the same act as the destroyer of liberty, especially as the sheep was a black one. Plainly, the sheep and the wolf are not agreed upon a definition of liberty; and precisely the same difference prevails today, among us human creatures."

81-Year Man Builds Himself a Coffin

(By VPA)

Realizing that his remaining years are limited 81-year-old Sandy Hill Taylor, Henrico county farmer, is preserving for his own funeral, having built a coffin for himself. Taylor said his wife, only 82, are quite casual about it all. There is very little of the macabre about Taylor and his coffin. He is proud of his handiwork and will demonstrate its suitability by climbing in and reclining to show that it fits, even with his hat on. He does it with neither hesitancy nor exhibitionism. Mrs. Taylor has no qualfis about death, either, but she has refused to allow her husband to make her a coffin. Mr. Taylor had done a lot of work with his tools and wood, and had built a number of coffins for other people, so he decided a few months ago to set about the task of building his own. He took some heart pinewood and soaked it thoroughly with creosote. This wood is used for the coffin's inner frame; outside, over all, he soldered a heavy coating of zinc. The last step was to put on some handles that had been given him years ago by an undertaker.

"It's a good coffin," Taylor says. "It's better than most of those $200 and $300 coffins. Why, I've seen some of those $200 coffins that I could get into and kick to pieces in a minute."

The aged man went to the Richmond area about 20 years ago. Born in Buckingham county in 1858, he was hoeing corn in his shirtail and fighting mosquitos after his legs when the Confederacy was at war, he related. Later he became a wheelwright and did a thriving business in the wagon and carriage era.

TO MY MOTHER

Mother, Mother, how I pray,
Hear me on this Mother's Day,
You, who always seem to co
What is right, and good and true.

You who trained me from my birth,
Shared my sorrows, and my mirth,
You, who taught me right from wrong,
You, who help me onward still.

You who help me on my way,
Onward till the close of day,
Then, you watch me through the night
Always doing what is right.

Patient woman, kind and true,
You, who hast the power to do
What is right in great or small,
My Mother, dearest of them all.

That group included school children, their teachers, pre-school children and their mothers, the adult blind and crippled, and invalids who were willing to go to be housed.

National Guard Unit To Be Enlarged

(By VPA)

The strength of the National Guard in Virginia and other states will be increased about 29 per cent in accordance with a recent order issued by President Roosevelt, according to notification received by Adjutant-General S. Gardner Waller, head of the Virginia unit. This action, General Waller said, would mean about 800 more men in the 04 Feminion's unit. General Waller has notified Governor Price that physical examination of all officers of the Virginia Guard, in line with Secretary of War Woodring's request last April, had been completed.

General Waller said Virginia Guard officers "are physically fit," that they "have given physical examinations by authorized physicians prior to September 1," and that "any apparent physical disability has either been waived by the war department or else those physically disqualified have been discharged."

Cabinet Makers' Work From Cradle to Coffin

The scope covered by the work of Chester county, Pa., cabinet makers was literally from the cradle to the coffin. The doors are filled with orders for these two articles, which with that other symbol of man's recumbency, the bed, seems to have been the most popular furniture of the day. In between, of course, were the various articles which a man used and from which he drew a large measure of comfort during his earthly existence, writes David Stockwell in "American Collector." There were chairs, tables for dining and other purposes, chests of drawers for storing his clothes, desks for his accounts and letters, tall clocks to measure the passing of time, and sundry items that filled the home of the Eighteenth and early Nineteenth centuries. All these were made, and made well, by the cabinet makers of Chester county.

According to the records, however, it was late in the Eighteenth century before any craftsman of this section actually styled himself a cabinet maker. The reason is not far to seek if one remembers that Chester county had no large centers of population at the time.

There was no courthouse in Goshen and the town of West Chester was not only unincorporated, but consisted of a little group of houses at a crossroads known as Turk's Head. Through the hills and hollows of the county, every township, hamlet or tiny cluster of houses had its own group of artisans. These were a cobbler, a tailor, a potter, a wheelwright, a joyner, a whitesmith, a blacksmith, and possibly, if the farmers were prosperous enough, a silversmith and a cabinet maker.

With only one week's practice behind them, but with an impressive list of veteran players, the Appomattox high school football team journeys to Bedford tomorrow afternoon for the opening game on a difficult schedule. Coach Charles Hitt indicated today that he would test out several combinations during the game, and hoped to make a creditable showing against the strong Bedford eleven.

Although five lettermen from last year's team are missing due to graduation, Coach Hilt has enough veteran material available to start a letter-winner at each position if he so desires. However, several of the new players are showing up so well in practice that several new men may be in the starting line-up.

Captain Jack Turman and three other lettermen are available for backfield duty. The backfield candidates include: Captain Turman, Harry Burge, Ivanoe Bryant, David Christian, Billy Ould, Harold Cawthorn, William Mitchell, Charles Bryant and Jack Burnett.

At the end position, the coach has Guy Cabell, Buck Wallace, Lathan Harvey, Julian Hesson, Herman Lee and Buck Smith. Tackle candidates are: Tom Guill, Buster Moore, Robert Allen Sears, and James Spiggle.

At center, Chester Ligon and J. B. Carson Jr. are vieing for the startinv nod. Guard aspirants are: Sid Conner, Joe Ferrell, Roy Crawley, Percy Miller, Pete Evans and Andrew Paulette.

The first home game will not be played until October 13. There is a possibility that the home games may be played on the new Lee Theatre baseball diamond, but no definite decision has been reached on that point.

Coach Hilt has expressed pleasure over the spirit of the squad, and frankly says the team will be better than last year's eleven. However, he groans when he looks at the ambitious schedule arranged, and admits that winning half of the games would constitute a successful year.

Many students and followers of the team are expected to make the trip to Bedford tomorrow.

Many chapters have already, she said, started work on activities to help the suffering in the countries at war. It is hopd that Appomattox county will be able to increase its membership this year.

It is assumed that all former membership quotas will be abandoned in an effort to reach a larger enrollment in the Red Cross.

Enrollmennt Is Ahead of Last Year at A. H. S.

Although considerable extra space is available in the new Appomattox high school, and the equipment is carried to increase the efficency of the school, things are still pretty crowded. No official enrollment totals are available as yet, but after a week's time indications are that the school will have nearly 75 more pupils than last year.

The high school department is nearing an enrollment of 400, with a record-sized sophomore class. This year's senior class has seventy on roll, and may reach 75 by mid-term. There are 101 freshmen and about 80 juniors.

The enlarged high school enrollment is attributed to an influx of students from Oakville and Liberty Mills. Enrollment at Oakville is understood to be 80 this year.

The grade department at Appomattox totals 378 thus far, making a grand total of 778 in the school. The first official enrollment figures will not be available until teachers submit their monthly reports October 1st.

From all sides have come reports of gratification at the set-up at the new school, and school officials are settling down to a year of increased standards.

Last year on October 1, there were 366 in the high school department here and 355 in the grades.
